

W
1915
AM8
M6

✓

PROSPECTUS.

THE undersigned are associated for the purpose of giving to Students, during the session of Medical Lectures, a series of Examinations upon the various branches of Medical science. The object of these examinations is to impress more indelibly upon the mind of the Student the information derived from Lectures—to induce a readiness in reply—and smooth, as much as possible, the path of his studies. A repetition of the many subjects embraced in a course of Medical Lectures, and the familiar explanations which the private examiner is able to give of them, must greatly lighten the labor of the Student, and tend to greater perfection in his Profession.

Examinations will be given on four days of the week, at such time as may best suit the convenience of the class.

It is desirable that the class be formed as soon as possible, and those desirous of availing themselves of the advantages to be derived from this course of instruction, can obtain information as to the method we intend adopting, and all other particulars, on application at the Office of either of the undersigned, in Sweringen's Buildings, corner of Fourth and Green streets.

NOV 29 1853

THOS. O'REILLY, M. D.

JOHN KENNY, M. D.

St. Louis, Oct. 17, 1850.

MEDICINE

PROSPECTUS.

THE undersigned are associated for the purpose of giving to Students during the session of 1850-51, a series of Lectures upon the various branches of Medical Science. The object of these examinations is to impart more fully upon the mind of the Student the information derived from Lectures—to include a practical in reply—and finally, as much as possible, the work of his studies. A repetition of the great subjects embraced in a course of Medical Lectures, and the familiar explanations which the private examiner is able to give of them, must give to the Student the labor of the Student and tend to greater perfection in his Profession.

Examinations will be given on four days of the week, at such time as may best suit the convenience of the class.

It is desirable that the class be formed as early as possible, and those desirous of attending themselves of the advantages to be derived from this course of instruction, can obtain information as to the method of admission, and all other particulars, on application at the Office of either of the undersigned, in Swearing's Building, corner of Fourth and Green streets.

THOS. O'REILLY, M.D.

JOHN KENNY, M.D.

St. Louis, Oct. 17, 1850.

Mr John. L. Stanger
Norfolk Virginia